Final Deliverable - Sales Intelligence & Executive Reporting

Selected portfolio analysis based on a constructed, internally consistent 12-month B2B sales dataset. The purpose is to demonstrate the reporting logic, KPI structure and management interpretation without representing confidential client data.

Annual sales	901.000 €
Year-end run rate	92.000 € / month
Target attainment	102,2%
Repeat-client revenue	54%

1. Executive Summary

Annual sales reached 901.000 €, finishing at 102,2% of the annual target. Performance strengthened in the second half of the year, with monthly sales increasing from 61.000 € in January to 92.000 € in December.

The positive headline is supported by a healthy repeat-client base, but growth is not evenly distributed. Direct sales remain the largest channel, while partner-sourced business shows the strongest opportunity for scalable growth. Management should therefore protect repeat revenue while improving pipeline discipline and partner conversion.

901K €	102.2%	54%	31%
Annual sales	Target attainment	Repeat-client revenue	Proposal win rate

2. Sales Performance

Sales exceeded target in seven of twelve months. The strongest performance appeared in Q4, where revenue reached 265.000 €, approximately 17% above Q1.

The trend is positive, but the reporting framework separates growth from one-off deal effects so management can distinguish sustainable commercial momentum from temporary spikes.

Quarter	Sales	Target	Attainment
Q1	193.000 €	198.000 €	97,5%
Q2	211.000 €	217.000 €	97,2%
Q3	232.000 €	238.000 €	97,5%
Q4	265.000 €	261.000 €	101,5%

3. Customer Intelligence

Repeat clients generated 54% of annual sales, providing a stable revenue base. New clients contributed 46%, with stronger acquisition in the second half of the year.

The top 10 customers represented 43% of sales. This concentration is not excessive, but management should track the share quarterly to prevent growth from becoming dependent on a small number of accounts.

Customer KPI	Result	Management interpretation
Repeat-client revenue	54%	Healthy retention base
New-client revenue	46%	Acquisition remains material
Top 10 concentration	43%	Monitor, but no immediate concentration risk
Average deal value	6.850 €	Use by channel and service for pricing decisions

4. Channel Performance

Direct sales generated 38% of revenue and remain the largest source of business. Partner referrals contributed 27%, inbound activity 19% and existing-client expansion 16%.

Partner business is strategically important because it combines lower acquisition effort with strong average deal value. The recommendation is to formalize partner tracking rather than treating referrals as an informal source.

5. Pipeline & Conversion

The proposal win rate is 31%. The overall result is acceptable, but performance varies materially by source: partner opportunities convert more strongly than cold or weakly qualified direct opportunities.

Management should monitor qualified pipeline coverage rather than raw lead count. A minimum forward pipeline equal to approximately 3 times the next 90-day sales target is recommended.

KPI	Current	Target
Proposal win rate	31%	35%+
Qualified pipeline coverage	2,4x	3,0x+
Repeat-client revenue	54%	50-60%
Partner revenue share	27%	30%+
Top 10 concentration	43%	< 50%

6. Executive Reporting Framework

The recommended monthly management report should answer five questions: Are we on target? What changed versus last month and last year? Which customers and channels explain the change? Is the forward pipeline sufficient? What action is required before the next review?

The report should therefore remain concise: headline KPIs, performance trend, customer and channel contribution, pipeline exceptions and a short action register with owner and due date.

7. Management Actions

1. Strengthen partner reporting: track partner-sourced pipeline, win rate and average deal value separately.
2. Improve pipeline coverage: maintain at least 3,0x coverage against the next 90-day target.
3. Protect repeat revenue: flag key accounts with declining order frequency or value before revenue is lost.
4. Review weak conversion: separate poor lead quality from proposal or pricing issues instead of treating all lost deals the same.
5. Standardize monthly reporting: use one KPI definition set and one management view across all commercial reviews.

8. Final Recommendation

KEEP THE REPORTING LAYER SIMPLE AND ACTION-ORIENTED. The company already has enough sales activity to generate useful intelligence. The priority is consistent KPI definitions, stronger pipeline visibility and disciplined interpretation of customer and channel performance.

The reporting system should help management decide where to focus commercial effort, not simply produce more charts.
